Nixon Sees U.S. 'Breaking Back' Of Energy Crisis

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (IHT) .- President Nixon told Congress tonight in a prepared State of the Union message that 1974 can be a year in which the United States "breaks the back of the energy crisis" and takes "another giant stride toward lasting peace in

In a message to a joint session of the impeachment-conscious Congress, the President sought to show that he still is the nation's leader despite his Watergate troubles. Along with his 25,000-word message to Congress, the President plans to personally deliver a nationally televised speech on Capitol Hill—his first address there since he reported buoyantly to the Congress on the results of his trips to China and the Soviet

he simply sent his State of the Union message to Congress but did not deliver it. The televised speech, which Mr. Nixon is to deliver with the message, is considered by White House aides to be one of the most important he has ever made since it is aimed at a Congress and a nation acutely aware of pressures to impeach him. A White House spokesman, asked whether the President in-tended to discuss in his address the possibility of his resigning, said "No."

In the message to Congress the President listed 10 goals to make 1974 a year of progress Israeli forces probably will not blow op the asphalted rock and for the nation. earth causeway they built to span "We enter 1974 not at the beginning of a historical cycle, President's message said. "Beginnings have been made in many vital areas, beginnings which we now must build upon. New needs have arisen which we are in the process of addressing. "Opportunities are coalescing which give us a chance to make historic progress toward a stable peace and expanding prosperity." The President said he launches his legislative recommendations with these basic premises:

Force-Feeding Convict for 2 Years Outrages a Laborite in Commons

LONDON, Jan. 30 (Reuters).—The morality of forcing food down a fasting prisoner's throat came under question in Britain today following a disclosure that one convict has been artificially fed for more than two years. "If it happened at a dogs' home there would be a national outcry." said Labor member of Parliament Jock Stallard A question from Mr. Stallard in the House of Commons elicited the government disclosure last night that a former hold-up man. Keith Baille, serving a 17-year term, had been on hunger strike for $19 days because he could not get

Later. Home Secretary Robert Carr said that Baillie had been forcibly fed ever since a day when he was accidentally given kosher margarine on a platter which han been used for serving other margarine. Mr. Carr said that from that moment, Baillie refused all prison food despite the advice of rabbis who said there were no religious grounds for rejecting the prison fare normally provided for Jewish convicts.

At first Baillie had to be force-fed by the regular prison method, Mr. Carr said. This involves inserting a tube through the esophagus into the stomach and pumping down liquid food. But for some time now Baillie has consented to accept food from a cup with a spont the Commons was told. A spokesman for the Board of Deputies of British Jewe said: "We will want to make investigations because it sounds shocking." The National Council for Civil Libertles commented:

The government disclosure also confirmed that two men and two women convicted of setting off car bombs in London are also hunger-striking to persuade authorities to let them serve their life sentences in their native Northern Ireland. The women, Marian and Dolours Price, have been force-fed for about 50 days.

BESANÇON, France, Jan. 30 (Reuters).-Workers at the bang-rupt Lip watch factory surrendered their secret "treasure chest" of 10,000 watches today. An agreement was finally eigned yesterday to put the company back on its feet.

The Lip workers, who took over the company last April and ran it by themselves for several months rather than accept its closure, hin the watches shortly before the police drove them off the promises in August.

The workers sold thousands of watches in succeeding months but gave up the rest of their hoard today to signal final acceptance of an agreement that will put back to work only 300 of Lip's original 1.300-strong work force. Another 200 may be rehired later.

Investigators Accuse Rebozo Of Taking Campaign Funds

By David E. Rosenbaum

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (NYT). Trust Co. of which Mr. Rebozo Senate Watergate committee prestigators have developed inormation that C. G. (Bebe) Re-020, President Nixon's close riend, may have converted prestential campaign money to his ersonal use, according to wellisced committee officials.

Mr. Rebozo refused this week turn over to the committee ocuments that the investigators elieve would provide proof of he conversion.

Committee sources said their formation had been obtained grough a careful search of varius financial records already in ic committee's possession. A ranking official on the comlittee said yesterday, "I have no oubt that the records will clearshow that the money went om the [campaign] committee Mr. Rebozo'e personal account nd that part of it was put to is personal use."

Officials said the amount of money was probably less than Mr. Rebozo could not be reach-i for comment. His attorneys, //lliam Frates and Alan Green, id not return telephone calls. The sources said they were not ire whether the money involved ad been donated to Mr. Nixon's 88 or 1972 campaigns, but they uid there was clear evidence that ansactions involving the money curred as late as June, 1972. Committee sources said, however, that they believed that the Florida campaign committee received a sum of money in 1969 that was intended as a campaign donation. All or part of the money, according to the sources, was placed in Mr. Rebozo'e personal account and was subsequently turned over to the Wakefield accounts. Samuel Dash, the committee's chief counsel, acknowledged today that Mr. Rebozo had refused to comply with certain parts of the committee's subpoens, but he would not say which documents specifically were involved. Mr. Dash said that Mr. Re-bozo's failure to answer the subpoens in full would be brought before the members of the com-mittee at their next meeting, probably next week. He also said that it was possible that the senators would decide to issue another subpoens that would require Mr. Rebozo to deliver the documents in person and that would subject him to a contemptof-Congress citation if he refused to do so. The committee voted last week to begin public hearings yesterday on the circumstances sur-rounding the $100,000 contribu-tion that agents of Howard R. Hoghes, the billionaire recluse, gave to Mr. Rebozo. But the panel agreed Saturday to postpone further testimony until after a jury had been selected in the New York trial of former Attorney General John N. Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans.

Thus, public committee sessions are unlikely to resume before the last week in February.

Mr. Rebozo had originally been scheduled to give sworn testimony in private to the committee's staff resterday, but Mr. Dash agreed Monday to put off that testimony until shortly before the hearings

Sen. Mansfield told reporters he felt Senate-House negotiators would attempt to draft a new bill,

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (AP).
-Murray M. Chotiner, 64, iongtime political confident of President Nixon and a former White House aide, died early today, White House officials said.

A spokesman at Washington Hospital Center said that death was believed due to a pulmonary embolism, a blood clot that is carried to the lungs. An autopay is scheduled. Mr. Chotiner was injured last week in an automobile accident in suburban McLean, Va., but was reported during the weekend to be recovering. Handled Publicity

Mr. Chotiner's tles with Mr. Nixon date back nearly three decades. He handled the pub-licity for Mr. Nixon's first connonal campaign in 1946, and was his state campaign manager four years later when Mr. Nixon won election to the Senate from California. When Mr. Nixon ran for Vice-President in 1952, Mr. Chotiner served as his national campaign manager. And in 1968, he was a special assistant to the manager of Mr. Nixon's presidential bid. Soon after Mr. Nixon's inauguration, Mr. Chotiner was nauguration, Mr. Chotaler was named general counsel for the white Eouse office handling trade negotiations. In 1970, he was named special counsel to the President, a post he left several years ago to return to private law practice in Washington.

Mr. Nixon was informed this morning of Mr. Chotiner's death, deputy press secretary Gerald L. Warren said, "and was deeply saddened by that news." Mr. Chotiner's name cropped up as a key figure in channeling dairy industry contributions to the Nixon re-election committee for the 1973 presidential cam-

But Mr. Chotiner's fame stemmed from his work in the early, hard-fought, highly partisan Nix-on campaigns in California. Mr. Chotiner was credited with developing the Nixon strategy of at-tacking opponents for being "soft on Communism" during races for the House and Senate in the late 1940s and early 1950s.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (NYT). The question last summer was whether the President could be ordered to comply with a sub-poens. A number of judges replied that be could. The question then became whose subpoena—only the Watergate special prosecutor's, or a subpoena from the Senate Watergate committee as well?

Yesterday, before the courts had decided the second question, a Los Angeles judge added a third question: Can anyone subpoens the President, in any court, in any trial, in any state?

State Superior Court in Los Angeles announced that he would authorize a procedure leading to a subpoens of President Nixon to testify in the trial of John D. Ehrlichman, his former aide, it evoked e vision of the President of the United States spending term rushing to the airport and flying off to one courthouse after another to testify in Wetergate-related cases.

First, can Judge Ringer, a member of the California state judiciary rather than a federal judge, require the presence of cone who lives outside the Second, can he, as a state official, require the presence of a federal official? And if those two questions are resolved, can a state judge order the President of the United States to appear? While there was some disigreement among lawyers interviewed on the answers to these questions, several said that the answer to each was a qualified

The first question, of a state court's power to reach beyond the boundaries of the state, is crucial, for if the judge has no such power, the case is over-Mr. Nixon can simply abstain from trips to San Clemente for a while. The Constitution apparently does not provide for such power. According to Richard Uviller, professor at the Columbia Law School, the defendant's right under the Sixth Amendmen witnesses does not extend beyond the jurisdiction of the state in which he is tried.

Compact Among States But, to remedy this "flaw," as Prof. Uviller put it, nearly all the states have entered into a compact to turn over witnesses one another. Among those that are part of the compact are California and the District of Columbia.

Under this compact, written into the statute books of the participating jurisdictions, a judge in State A can sign a "certificate" stating that a certain person in State B is needed as a witness in a trial in State A. This certificate is then sent to the court in State B (or the District of Columbia) where the person state official can exert control over a federal official, in view of the fact that the federal system is constitutionally "supreme" over the state system. There have been some cases in which federal courts have ruled that state courts cannot exert control over federal officials, such as draft officials. To Gerald Gunther, law profes-

Separate Question

But, as Prof. Gunther put it, "it's a separate question whether the President should be treated differently than any other federal official." The question here, as it was last fall when the special Weter-gate prosecutor subpoenaed Mr. Nixon to obtain the Watergate tapes, is whether the President subject to subpoena and, if so, in what circumstances.

Judge John J. Sirica, and then the majority of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, ruled in favor of the Watergate prosecutor, re-jecting the President's contention thet he had total immunity. The Court of Appeals ruling, which was never appealed, provides some chies as to how the Ehrlichman case may be resolved.

Saying that the President "is not above the law's commands, the Court of Appeals ruled that "application of executive privilege depends on a weighing of the public interest protected by the privilege against the

The fact that a state court is demanding the President's presence adds a factor that the Court of Appeals did not have to deal with. As one law professor commented, there are a lot more state courts than there are federal courts, and thus a lot more potential areas that mig up the President's time.

A second factor which could weigh against Mr. Ehrlichman in the balancing test, of course, ie that he is seeking the President's testimony in court rather than simply presidential documents.

Prof Uviller, for one, feels that tine test should be whether the President's participation in the judicial process would take up so much time as to "jeopardize" performance of his regular duties, As Prof. Gunther points out, even the old cases, such as the one involving Jefferson, raised the possibility of what Prof. Gunther called "undue inconvenience" to the President.

Subpoens of Monroe The Court of Appeals opinion in the tapes case, in fact, notes that when President James Monroe was subpoensed in 1818 to sppear as a defense witness in a court-martial, he was able to satisfy the court by stating that his official duties precluded his personal appearance but that he would answer written questions a promise he subsequently kept. Thus, if Mr. Nixon would be greatly inconvenienced by eppearing at the Ehrlichman trial, and if his written answers to questions might satisfy the defendant's need for information, the balancing test would not require Mr. Nixon's personal appearance. And the would thus not stand. And the subpoens explanation last week of the administration's altered nuclear strategy answered some-but not all-of the major concerns advanced by its critics.

Nuclear Targeting

The new strategy involves re-targeting some Minutemen intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBids) for a "counterforce" role of striking at Soviet military installations, including missile sites, as well as cities. If this were to lead to an American pre-emptive first-strike capability—and a similar capability on the Soviet side—the advantages of shooting first might create such nuclear nervousness on both sides that an atomic exchange might be triggered in e crisis.

Mr. Schlesinger has now indicated, however, that the American objective remains crisis stability and avoidance of heir-trigger nervousness through a continued strategy of deterrence based on a "second-strike" force capable of surviving a Soviet "first strike" and of retaliating egainst Russian cities. He told a news conference that the administration was not now seeking to develop "e major counterforce capability"-although he held that possibility open if the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT II), which resume next month, do not bar such a cepebility for the Soviet Union.

Also reassuring was Mr. Schlesinger's statement that expansion or improvement in the present arsenal of nuclear weepons would not necessarily occur-presumably if adequate limitation of Soviet forces can be achieved in SALT II. The defense secretary is taking the position that the size and character of the American noclear forces will be "primarily paced" by the force structure developed by the Soviet Union.

The danger is that once an improved weapon is developed, the pressures to deploy It become almost trresistible, as former

A Task for the Ervin Committee

Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger's Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara warned the nation after leaving office. Moreover, MIRV multiple warhead missiles can only be brought under control by limiting flight tests and development, to head off a second generation of bigger, more accurate warheads. The United States developed the MIRV, but now, as the Soviet Union catches up (the Pentagon has just announced Soviet tests of a new ICBM with MIRV capability), it has soddenly become the chief threat to American security.

What must be avolded now is another "action-reaction" cycle of research and development in the MIRV race that carries the United States and the Soviet Union beyond another point of no return. American nuclear superiority, by Mr. Schlesinger's own testimony, cannot be overteken before the early 1980s by the current Soviet buildup. Warnings to Moscow to avoid a new MIRV race and to negotiete seriously in SALT undoubtedly are justified.

But if Mr. Schlesinger really means to let any future American build-up be 'primarily paced" by the Soviet force structure, there is no need to rush ahead with some of the programs now under way, such as the incredibly costly Trident nuclear-missie submarine. This is designed to meet a hypothetical anti-submarine warfare threat, the character of which not only is not known but cannot even be guessed right now.

Above all is the need to hold back in development and testing of bigger, more accurate MIRV warheads. Instead of replacement and improvement of American and Soviet nuclear war cepabilities, which one day might tempt a nervous leader into their use, the aim should be to limit, to reduce, and even to eliminate those capabilities by progressive cutbecks in MIRV-tipped, landbased ICBMs on both sides.

The World Energy Conference

By James Reston

WASHINGTON—In mid-Febru-W ary, most of the leading oil-producing and oil-consuming countries will hold a conference here to see what can be done about the supply, price and dis-tribution of fuel in the short run, and the development of nuclear energy for civilian purposes in the

This could be a critical and even historic meeting for all the countries concerned, but unfortunately the outlook for cooperation is bleak for a variety of reasons:

1. Almost all the major industrial nations now have weak governments and grave internal poiltical and economic problems. This is as true of Jepan and the is of the United States and

2. The major oil-producing countries of the Middle East are also divided, for while they can combine against Israel and Israel's friends, and agree on hiking up the price of oil, the short-range advantages of this policy hurt their chances of getting the ad-vanced technology of the West in the coming nuclear-energy age, and their price-gouging has crested a terrible crisis to underdeveloped countries like India, which now faces a fuel-price hike of $1 billion a year.

3. In these circumstances, weak and divided governments with conflicting interests are in no position to enter into new cooperative efforts for the solution of the energy problem in the next decade—thay don't even know whether their governments can survive the pressures of 1974.

An Illustration

The present condition of the Nixon administration Illustrates the point. It has in effect offered a compromise to the oilproducing countries: Lift the off embargo and lower your prices, and the United States will help you to develop enriched uranium for use in nuclear-power reactors for the modernization of your industries

The administration has also said to the other advanced technological nations: Let's look be-youd the present fuel shortage to the days when all nations will be depending not on fossil fuels but on nuclear, solar and thermal energy, for this is a world prob-lem and can be solved in the long run only by cooperative action on a worldwide scale.

This was the basis of the U.S. invitation to the Feb. 11 energy there are several hitches here, First, the French government, for one, felt that Washington published the site and terms of the invitation without adequate con-sultation or preparation. More important, the Nixon administration itself is deeply divided about the wisdom of offering to share its superior nuclear scientific and technological knowledge with the other competitive industrial nations of the world. Even the public discussions of future American energy policy have confused both the Congress and the foreign officials who will be meeting here in February, For President Nixon has been emphadaing the need to make the United States self-sufficient in energy, and this is the objective of officials at the Atomic Energy Commission, while Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has been emphasizing the need for worldwide cooperation to solve the crists and offering American nuclear skills as part of the bar-"The United States," President

Nixon said last Nov. 7. "must embark upon a major effort to achieve self-sufficiency in energy, an effort I call Project Independence. If successful, Project Independence would by 1980 take us to a point where we are no longer dependent to any significant extent upon potentially insecure foreign supplies of energy."

Kissinger Offer

But Klesinger, on Dec. 12, argued that while the United States could with difficulty solve its energy problems by itself. Europe and Japan could not hope to do so. He suggested instead a world-wide sharing of skills and infor-mation to deal not merely with America's energy problem now but with the world's problem in the

"As an example," he said, "I would cite the field of enriching uranium for use in nuclear power reactors . . . what could be more sensible than that we plan together to assure that scarce resources are not wasted by needless duplication The United States is prepared to make a very major financial and intellectual contribution to the objective of solving the energy crists en a

There is some support here for this generous long-range effort suggested by Klasinger, but there is also powerful opposition not only in the Congress but within Nixon's official family. Don't we conference in Washington, but have enough trouble in the export markets as it is? Why give away America's special knowledge and skills in the nuclear field, which is the major coming source of energy, in order to ease the crisis in the dwindling supplies of fossil fuels?

These are the questions that are bubbling under the surface in the administration right now, and they have not been resolved. As a result, the energy conference is likely to end with study groups and proclamations of good will, but not much more. The French and the British don't want to give up their immediate advantage with the Arabs, and the Arabs don't want to give up their high profits in return for nuclear promises from an administration that is divided now and will not be in power in the 1980s.

Dreams of worldwide coopera tion make good speeches, but all these governments are living from week to week. So you shouldn't expect too much from the February conference. It may define, but it is not likely to solve either the short-range or the long-range

The Plight of Refugee

By Allan Tillier

PARIS.—The plight of refugees never ends and this year is going to see near-record numbers on the move. Some are victims of new conflicts, others are the flotsam of forgotten upheavals. Helping these people is probably the most valuable task performed by the international bureaucratic machine in Geneva.

Sadruddin Aga Khan, Genevabased United Nations High Com-missioner for Refugeed, is still pressuring governments in Europe and South Americs to take more political refugees from Chile where the junta's latest deadline for limited safe conduct out of the country expires today.

France, West Germany, Sweden and Switzerland have set the example in Western Europe. More than 1,000 Chileans and foreign supporters of the late Salvador Allende have been granted saylum in France. West Germany is taking 850, Sweden around 600 and Switzerland several hundred. Cubs (800) and Mexico (250) have been the big takers outside West-

A family of three was permitted back to Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria took three people and Hungary 12 after a lot of prodding. Poland came out better by welcoming 40.

John Thomas, an American and director of the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration (the word European is a leftover from the body's foundation in 1952) has been supervising the refugee sirilft out of Santiago and it has been a difficult task given the shortage of charters, the 24-hour safe conduct passes granted fortunate Chileans and 48-hour eards for foreigners.

The 1974 refugee may travel by 747 jet rather than ship, but Thomas and his team have had a difficult time finding seats on regular airline flights. A recent batch of 350 refugees used 20 dif-ferent flights while the 3,400 Chileans and foreigners moved since the September coup have been spread over 400 flights.

The refugees trickle out. Last week 100 Chileans went to Cuba and two days later there were 41 foreigners also seeking seats for Cuba. Western airlines have helped by offering cut-rate tickets. Slowly, the foreign embassies in Santiago are being emptied of Chilean political refugees although many more ere in hiding all over the country.

Some 1,000 foreigners-professiocal men who had fled other South American countries as well as European and South American leftists-fill the centers of the Chilean national committee for refugees, headed by the Lutheran Bishop Heimut Frenz. They await the "salvo conducto," the quick dash to the airport and settlement in hostels in the Paris suburbs, Stockholm or Havana. The committee's mandate from Welfare State Advances in U.S.

By Joseph Kraft

WARRINGTON-One piece of moderately good news needs to be spread as the country begins its annual national stocktaking with the State of the Union message, the economic report and the President's budget. Engrinous progress has been made in the past decade in improving the lot of the poor.

What now has to be done is a consolidation, not a great leap forward. We do not need grandiese programs with high-sounding names so much as an acknowledgment that we have become a welfare state.

As usual with social progress in the United States, no group or party or administration can take the credit. Advance came about in the normal American wavresult of lots of different actions, many of them unnoticed, by people pulling in opposite direc-

One major achievement was the economic policy of the Kennedy-Johnson years. Steady economic growth from 1962 through 1969 cut heavily into unemployment and marginal employment. As a result, the number of persons below the poverty line was cut. from about 40 million to 25 million people. That is where it stands today. A second achievement was the extension in both the benefits and the reach of the food-stamp program. That came about chiefly, I believe, in response to the efforts made by San. George McGovern, the South Dakota Democrat who focused national attention on the "hun-

Expanding Base Thanks to his efforts, the program has been expanded from a coverage of two million persons when the decade began to about 13 million persons today. The value of the aid to each recipient has risen by over 30 percent. The benefits are higher than President Nixon's welfare reform program would have achieved if it had been passed two years ago. A third important improvement has come in the area of rationalizing welfare. One part of President Nixon's reform package which did pass calls for federalixing payments to the adult poor -the same, the blind and the disabled. As a result, welfare payments to more than five million persons were placed under social security at the beginning of this year. Since they benefit from an automatic costof-living increase, those five million persons will soon be receiv-ing income which puts them above the poverty line of roughly $4.400 a vear.

Lastly, the administration wants to supplement health care, already greatly expanded by Medicare and Medicaid, with a new insurance program. The new program will insure a family's medical costs above $1,500 a year. The poor who cannot afford the insurance will be provided special

On the Way

When all these programs are put together, the result is very significant progress in the war on poverty declared by President Johnson. This point is not merely made by supporters of Preside Nixon searching for a rationale to do nothing. It is made with perhaps most force by Prof. Robert Lampman of Wisconsin, a leading student of income distribution who has no special brief for the present administration.

In a special issue of the quar-terly The Public Interest, Prof. Lampman writes of the period since 1964: "There was a great drop in the percentage of people living in income poverty ... there was a considerable increase in public money for the poor ... there was some narrowing of inequality in the consumption of food and medical care, and per haps of housing, educations services and public recreations facilities as well." To be sure, the task is not complete. Ten million people still hve under a weilere system characterized by punitive admiristration and standards which vary from state to state on terribly inequitable basis. Some thing needs to be done in the field of housing for the poorespecially in view of the recession in home building. A great many existing programs, notably food stamps, need to be convert ed into cash-grant programs Most important of all perhaps the tax bite on poor people need to be eliminated.

But the fact is that we see nearly there. We are within reach of a mature welfare state in-cluding a comprehensive antipoverty program. The next step is not a giant step, but a ratiosalization of existing measures We should take it with eyes open not under the drug of some tank?

Ford's 'Mediocrity'

--- Letters

I've been fascinated watching you and the other liberal media create the myth of Gerald Ford's "mediocrity". A tour de force of mind and fact-bending.

Now I hold no brief for Ford, but, if memory serves, he was an all-America athlete, graduated from a prestigious law school had a distinguished war record as an officer, has been repeatedly elected from a large, diverse, traditionally Democratic state, has won the respect of both parties and the leadership of his own.

By what standard is this "mediocre"? Compared to other recent presidents and presidential hopefuls, it is positively Promethean. Take Ted Kennedy, for example; Expelled from college for cheating on an exam he couldn't pass, army private, bottom of his class in law school, elected through unprecedented family pull, Chappaquiddick, etc.

If Ford's medicore, one shudders to think what Kennedy ANTONY C. SMITH.

Legal End of Tribe But by gaining those rights, they approved a federal agraement to terminate the Siletz tribe, which in effect meant giving up special privileges grant-ed to Indians.

A leader in the movement to reorganize the Siletz, Robert Rilatos, recalls that the appeal of being able to go into bars was strong.

"There was a lot of inter-marriage," Mr. Rilatos, 41, said in recalling the 1956 events. "So if a Siletz had a white wife, or the other way around, one could go in but the other couldn't.

"This is what they held out to us. They sort of glossed over the rest. I was against the idea of terminating back then," he said. "Hell, there were so many home brewers around here it didn't really matter." The Siletz have shrunk in numbers since the 1800s, when they first came here. Now there are about 300 of them living in the area. The government set aside about 1 1/4 million acres on the coast in 1855 on the correct assumption that the coastal Indians would lose their war with the government and need a place

About 25 tribes, most of them small, were put there, and be-came the Siletz Confederation. Lands Were Taken

But the Siletz lands did not last. They were taken by government decrees, railroad in-terests and, in 1887, the Dawes Act, which turned much of the land over to white homesteaders. The Indians got $42,000 for the land then, and $100,000 was placed in trust. Newspaper clippings indicate that the $100,000 may have been paid around the turn of the century, although his-torians have been unable to find government records of it.

Some of the land that was put into trust for individual Indians fell into the hands of white homesteaders. The rest of the lands were sold to pay taxes or the costs of locating heirs who had left the reservation as they passed from one generation to the

All the land except for five acres of timber left Indian hands. But those five acres were sole in the final settlement of 1956. The Siletz now say they were persuaded to sell for the wrong reasons, and for too little money.

Facing Facts With Saint Laurent

By Eugenia Sheppard

PARIS, Jan. 30.—In Paris it's chic to be square this senson, At his opening this morning, Yves Saint Laurent, who 10 years ago showed the first made-toorder black leather motorcycle jacket, showed the perfect lady collection of all time. The clothes were as simple, elegant and pure as rock crystal. There were no gags or spoofs anywhere along the line and the bride who osed to romp in wearing a brief nightgown, a bikini or whatever, was muffled from head to toe in white organdy. She even wore a traditional wedding vell and carried a big bougnet of lilles. If Mademoiselle Chanel would have died of mortification at her own collection yesterday, she would have been out of her head with happiness at Yves Saint Laurent's.

The rumor circulating here this past week that Saint Laurent had gone back to his old, tough, boy-ish look is so untrue that it is positively funny. It is the most feminine collection he has ever made, everything delicately proportioned, in nonstartling patterns and pastel colors.

You can forget all about Saint Laurent's previous reputation for designing only with tall, rangy girls in mind.

Tip-off to the Saint Laurent daytime look was Lou Lou de La Falsise, greeting the opening-day audience in a black and white check jacket, a white shirt and just-below-the-knee black pleated wool skirt. Naturally her hair was red and on artificial flower decorated her lapel.

Facing Facts Saint Laurent has faced facts about what may be the universal reaction to the longer skirts, so he makes his the shortest in Paris, With everyone else making wide shoulders, his are less exaggerated than most,

His pants suits are made of nonbulky men's wear fabrics. Worn over diagonally striped blouses, they have none of the oversize look many of the other collections have played up. His suits are either pin-striped wool or silk with full back, belted jackets. He continued his trademark skinny coat with the tie belt, but adds a slim princess version with white collar and cuifs, the kind of thing that best bred New Yorkers used to wear on Easter Sunday. His Alice-blue wool coat, worn over a silk print pastels, are above the ankles in and small but cheerful printed crepes, many with their own hem length coats, Yves brines back the flattering bateau neckline that is slit from one shoulder to the other. Most of the dresses have very short, full sleeves and others are sleeveless. As far as fabrics go, the subtle silk stripes in two shades of the same color were especially attractive.

For the Saint Laurent evening ok, Alexandre has provided thirtyish hairdos, soft and swooping shoulder length curled ands, the party dresses, pure as the daytime, favor bare shoulders and shoe-string shoulder straps, but there is positively no hankypanky about cutouts or see-

Ungaro, whose collection opened this morning is the painter among the Paris designers. His heart is in the prints that have en worn by many of the best dressed socialites on two continents, and he has been largely responsible for the trick of mixing two or three designs together and peeling them off in layers. This time, though, his slik georgettes in solid colors stole the show from the prints. Probably the most beautiful was the whiteon-white silk cont over a white silk dress.

Ungaro opened his show with two smashing coats. Made of striped gray and white, lightweight wool, they were cut like kimono sleeve bathrobes and forecast the full, oversize proportions of the rest of the clothes. It is one of the most popular looks in the Paris collections.

Famous for his coats, the kind of designing he did first, Ungaro shows some good-looking raincosts. like the gold colored silk that has the same kimono sleeves as the striped coats. Techniques of Indian Cooking

By Dharamjit Singh PEOPLE invertebly ask if non-

Indians can cook genuine Indian food. The answer is yesif they understand the basics. Aromatics are the heart of Indian cooking, aromatics tempered by the careful use of heat to schieve nuance and subtle flavor. Then comes inventiveness and the use of cooking techniques that are largely unfamiliar in the West. Aromatics play the same part in Indian cuisine as the madeleine in Marcel Proust's "Remembrance of Things Past." As Proust put it, the past subsists in things present, smells and tastes remain and 'bear almost infallibly...tho vest structure of recollection," Thus aromatics evoke, for the Indian, the Golden Age. But voluptiousness is tempered by the alchemy of heat. The key word here is tapas—solar, kinetic, men-tal heat force, the secrets of which were transposed from medicine and yoga to the culinary field. Indian cooks use utensils of the heaviest metals, copper and brass (both lined, of course). steel and cast fron, as well as unglazed earthenware. Today's enamel-clad cast-iron pans are excellent. Cast aluminum utensils are too.

The korma technique of saucing cooked - or uncooked meats or vegetables, as well as the secondary process of steaming them (the dumn process) in their own juices or special sauces differs radically from Western procedures. The result is tender. fragrant, aromatic food. Some times, the korma, instead of being steamed is further cooked in a vessel hermetically scaled with wheat flour—the result is called Sauces for kormas vary from almost none to several spoonsful. No thickeners or flours are used. For thickness and texture, Indians use onions, shallots, garlic; green leaf herbs; poppy seeds; as well as gourd vegetables. The point is to achieve balance. In some recipes, one aromatic will predominate; in another, two or three interplay; and, in yet another, there will be a synthesia of 20 or more.

The perfect cooking medium is butter (double-clarified but-ter, reduced and strained). The best substitute is butter mixed with margarine or homogenized

In other words, it is not a popular opera, and is revived only for particular reasons, chiefly when there is a star mezzosoprano to sing the title role. In fact, the post-war productions at La Scale have centered around Ebe Stignani, Giulietta Simionato and—since the 1962 production— Fiorenza Cossotto.

Cossotto was very much the ster of this week's "Favorita," despite the presence in the cast of the tenor Luciano Pavarotti and the barlione Piero Cappuccilli, both artists of international level. Neither of them, however, was in good voice; both sounded tired, and Cappuccill's fatigue caused some faulty intonation in his big scene, while Pavarotti's

For that matter, the whole evening was marked by a rhythmic uncertainty, largely the fault of Nino Verchi's flaccid conducting. This may not be Donizettl's greatest score (though it is studded with lovely pages), but for that very reason it demands a conductor of temperament and sensitivity to the idiom. Verchi gave no evidence of either.

The audience made its disapproval very clear: the galleries, with an inventive variety of cries. suggested the maestro's talents might be better employed in some other field. The bass Ivo Vinco, who sang Baldassare, was also the target of hostile demonstrations. To tell the truth, he sang very badly, and in one concerted passage caused trouble also for his colleagues. The audience's exasperation even touched Cossotto, after she had attempted an unwise and unsuccessful high note, but the grumbles were then counterbalanced by an ovation.

Though her performance may not have been subtle, it was the best thing about the evening. Tito Varisco's sets, though new, were conventional (and inferior to those Nicola Benois created in 1962-where are they now?). The same adjective applies to the staging of Margherita Wallmann. In another theater or at

German Auto Industry Expects Sharp Decline

FRANKFURT, Jan. 30 (AP-DJ).—Production and sales of West Germany's motor vehicle industry are expected to decline sharply this year, the Automobile Industry Federation eald today.

Seles in 1873 totaled 53 billion marks, up about 10 percent from 1972 Achim Diekmann, the federation's general manager, said. Production rose about 3.5 percent, to 3,949,065 units, from 3.815.982 in 1972. Mr. Diekmann sald the first half was very good, with production rising to a record of 18,545 units a day in May. It declined to 12,781 units a day in December, however. Mr. Diekmann said that after a 66 percent decline in orders in December from the like 1972 month, the order inflow improved in January. He said this was largely attributable to the end of the Sunday driving ban imposed in December.

The auto industry is pinning its hopes on the export market to belp offset the expected domestic decline. Mr. Dick-mann sald, although exports will probably decline in 1974.

Mr. Dickmann said the general slowing of the economy expected for 1974, sharply higher gasoline prices and other rising costs for motor vehicles as well as the shaky employ-ment situation are the main reasons for the expectations of lower sales and production.

U.K.-U.S. Oil Firms' Merger Criticized in Senate Hearing.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

PUK Expects 30 % Rise in Profits The Pechiney-Ugine-Kulhmann group expects an increase of et least 30 percent in its 1973 consolidated net earnings to a minimum of 350 million francs (about $67.3 million). Consolidated oet earnings per share are provisionally set at 14 frames for 1973, up from 10.90 in 1972. The group's consolidated 1973 sales are expected to exceed 16 hillion francs, of which 45 percent will be exports, up from 13.4 billion francs lu 1972. Although there seem to be no problems for the group's raw materials supply. PUK is concerned with their high costs. However, expectation of a higher selling price for aluminum certain markets is likely to offset the additional charges, the company notes.

Texaco Plans Refinery Expansion

Texaco plans a $240-million construction program that will more than double the firm's capability to process imported crude oil that otherwise could not be refined because of emission standards, product quality specifications and metallurgical restrictions of equipment. Much foreign oil is "sour" crude, which has a high sulphur content. The bulk of the Texaco program will involve construction of sulpbur removal and recovery facilities et four of its major U.S. refineries. The program will heing total capacity of Texaco's 12 U.S. refineries to more than 1.1 million barrels a day, the company says. Fiat's Export Sales Decline

Flat reports its European export car sales fell between 23 and 39 percent in the first half of January compared with the same period of October, 1973, before the output and supply restrictions imposed by oil producing countries. Sales were most affected in Denmark, off 39 percent, followed by Holland, 36 percent, Belgium, 30 percent, West Germany. 29 percent, France. 27 percent, and Switzerland 22 percent, according to company figures. Fiat says domes tic car sales were also 'markedly lower' over the same period, but gives no actual figures.

Cedar Holdings' N.Y. Deal Canceled

Chester National Bank, of Chester. New York, has canceled its contract with Cedar Holdings Ltd., of London, that called for Cedar Holdings to purchase 51 percent of Chester National's shares. Cedar Holdings made its $3.9 million offer in October, 1972 and the Federal Reserve Board approved it last December. Shortly after, however. Cedar was caught up in what was termed a "run on the bank" by other financial institutions. Treding in its shares has been halted on the London Stock Exchange since Dec. 20. J.W. Sturr, Chester National president. says the contract was canceled because circumstances under which it was made had changed.

Report on Oil Embargo Boosts Wall St. Prices

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (IHT) -The possibility of a break-up in the Arab embargo on oil to the United States propelled New York Stock Exchange prices strongly higher today.

The Dow Jones industrial average advanced 10 points to 862.32. and advances outnumbered de-clines about 980 to 460. Trading picked up moderately from low recent levels. Volume totaled 18.78 million shares compered with 12.85 million yester-Brokers attributed the gain largely to a report that first in-dications of a possible breaking bave appeared. At least one U.S. oil company reportedly has been told it can expect a cargo of Saudi Arabian oli by late February. Brokers said the gain was assisted by falling short-term interest rates and reports that the Federal Reserve Board has again eased its credit policy.

Standard Oil of Obio rose 2 3/8 to 60 3/4, Exxon 1 7/8 to 57 3/4 and Standard of Califor nia 1 1/4 to 30 1/2. The last reported fourth-quarter per-share carnings nearly twice that of a year earlier. Natomas gained 3 3.4 to 53 3.8 following a big rise in earnings for the full yeer. U.S. Steel added a fraction, but Bethlehem Steel pointed slightly lower. Both firms reported higher earnings, but Beth Steel said it does not expect 1974 production or shipments to match last year's levels. Coca-Cola Bottling feli 2 1,4 to 8 3/4. Coca-Cola and Coca-Cola Co. down 1,2 to 118 7.8. said they have termineted merger

Philip Morris, which reported higher quarterly earnings, picked up 2 7 8 to 113 3/8. Black & Decker gained 5 to 105, Polaroid 3 5/8 to 82 5/8, IBM

3 to 248 1'4. Du Pont 3 to 159. Burroughs 2 to 197, Texas Instruments 3 tn 112 5,8, and Ponderosa Systems 1 to 35 1 8. Gold mining stocks fell several points following a drop in the price of bullion on European money markets. Homestake Miuing dropped 3 7/8 to 82 5/8. Dome Mines 4 3/4 to 164 1/4. ASA 4 to 79, and Campbell Red Lake 2 1.4 Digital Equipment gained 4 10

104, and Walt Disney 1 5.8 to American Motors, the most active stock, dipped 1/4 to 13 3/8, reversing a recent strong trend. Prices edvanced in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index rose 0.67 to 97.50.

McCrory rose 1 3.4 to 16 1.4, Buttes Gas & Oil 7/8 to 28 7 8, and George A. Hormel 1/8 to 10. The last said it expects "noticeably better 1974 earnings compared with $1.54 last year.

U.S. Construction Contracts Decline 5% During Month

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (AP-DJ). -New construction contracts slipped 5 percent in December to $5,13 billion from $6.42 billion a year earlier, the F. W. Dodge division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems said todey. Helped by a bealthjer building climate earlier last year, however, such construction for all of 1873 rose 10 percent from 1972 to $100.07 billion.

"Part of the December drop was the further decline of housing starts—a trend that began early in 1973, hut wbich, until now, was more than offset by a boom in nonresidential work," said George Christie, vice-president and chief economist for Dodge, "In December, bowever, the more recent problems of scarcity and shortages finally brought non-residential building up short," be

Contracts for nonresidential building totaled $2.21 billion in December, down substantially from Novembur's $3.65 billion, but up about 1 percent from a year earlier.

Residential bullding contracts slipped to $2.34 billion in December, down 25 percent from Decem-

However, "considering the large backlog of projects at the planning and bidding stage, it is quite likely that the higher mid-1973 rate of contracting will soon be restored," Mr. Christie said.

South misjudged a problem in bidding psychology, in the disgramed deal, and landed in a disastrous contract. But the zero he was destined to collect turned into a top score when his opponents proceeded to misjudge the defense. .

When West opened with one diamond, North chanced a one-spade overcall. This was clearly below the accepte: standards for a vulnerable overcall.

East's action was also sub-standard. One no-trump following an overcall is the only
"free" bid that shows additional values in most bidding styles. A spade-stopper and 8 to 10 points are the usual requirement, and East did not measure up to that standard.

South now stared at his 13 points and was highly suspicious. An opening bid on his left, a vulnerable overcall opposite him, and a free bid of one no-trump on his right did not add up. South reached a highly erroneous but not unnatural conclusion. He decided that the player on his left had opened a psychic with little or no highcard strength.

a personal tragedy enshrined in the seemingly unending col-lective tragedy of Britain's rela-tions with Ireland. Born in 1864 near Dublin (but educated in Ulster), he was by nationality British and only gradually came to regard himself as an Irishman pure and simple. Indeed the greater part of his adult life was spent in the British public rer-vice. At the age of 20 be became a volunteer agent in the private-enterprise state H. M. Stanley was setting up in the Congo basin, and which later became the private empire of Leopoid II of the Belgians, under the name of the Congo Free State. The atmosphere of the place is movingly described in "Heart of Darkness by Joseph Conrad, who met and admired Casement at the time.

Casement was tall, good-look-ing, sensitive and introspective, already a confirmed victim of what he described as the terrible disease of homosexuality. He was into a suit at the two-level. So also an idealist and a passionate defender of the underdog. In 1895 he entered the British consular service, first as consul in Portuguese East Africa, later in Portuguese West, and in this ca-pacity he carried out an in-vestigation of conditions in the Congo under Leopold's rule. His report was a sickening indictment of the horrors of the forced labor system imposed on the natives, and also an exposure of the mendacity, hypocrisy and sheer dishonesty of Leopold himself.

In 1908 he was sent as consul to Rio, and from there carried out a similar investigation of the treatment of Indians in the rubber estates along the Putumayo River, a tributary of the Amazon. The report, published in 1912, made Casement an international celebrity and he was knighted. During these years, however, he was becoming increasingly convinced that Britain's treatment of Ireland was also a case of colonialist atrocity. He became heavily involved in the Home Rule movement and in attempts to arm Irish nationalists, both against the British and against the already heavily armed Ulster Protestants. He resigned from the Foreign Service, and the outbreak of war in 1914 found him in the. United States. He had long admired the Germans, both for their work in Africa, and for what he considered to be their civilizing mission in Central Europe. He deplored Sir Edward Grey's policy of aligning Britain with France and Russia-nations he detected outset, expressed the hope that Germany would win the war, He had no sympathy for gallant little Belgium, since he knew the Belgians to be cruel and ruthless exploiters of the weak, As for Ireland he thought it would get a much better deal from a victorious Germany, In October, 1914, he took the fatal step of traveling secretly to Germany, where he tried to raise a volunteer Irish brigade from among British prisoners of war of SIR Roger Casement's life was Irish birth, This, as he knew, was to cross the threshold of treason moreover, it was a total failure In April, 1916, he made what in foresaw would be the fatal sacrifice of traveling to Ireland by U-boat, to assist, in person, in the projected Irish rising. He was captured, tried and executed.

Interest in Casement has continued because of the circumstances surrounding this last episode in his life. He was badly defended by his counsel, Alex-ander M. Sullivan, who made the forform attempt to plead that Casement was not guilty under the meaning of the Treasons Act of Edward III. In fact, he would have done better to defend him-self, plead Irkh nationality and insist he be treated as a primmer of war. This would not have secured acquittal, but it might have saved his life.

Even so, an international agilation was set up on his behalf to persuade the British government to grant a reprieve. It was irus-trated by the fact that, for many years, Casement had kept diaries recording, among other things, his homosexual activities. These fell into the hands of the British authorities, and extracts were privately circulated among prominent people who would otherwise have pleaded for his life. It could be said, then, that Casement was the last man to be hanged in England for homosexpality.

For many years Irish nation alists, and others, believed that the diaries had been deliberately forged by the British, a theory made plausible by the resolute refusal of the Home Office to al-low any independent person to inspect them.

In 1956, Brian Inglis, the editor of the weekly Spectator, was shown a typed transcript of part of the diaries, and subsequently published an article about them. Three years later, after fierce pressure, they were made available for inspection in the Public Records Office, There can be little doubt that they are genuine, though even today the Home Office refuses permission for photographs of the originals to be published.

In 1965, as a final gesture of appeasement to Irish public opinion, the Prime Minister, Ca. old Wilson, allowed Casemen, 5 remains to be removed from Bri-ton Prison, and transferred to Ireland, where they were burned with full honors. The whole of the melancholy tale has now been told by Mr. Inglis, in a book heltivity and excellent common scree. He reveals Casement as a noble but flawed figure: a man capable of the greatest courage, yet torn apart both by his conflict of loyalties and by his sexual urges.

two fights with Muhammad Ali had given him "great confidence" in himself and that his main problem going against Foreman would be finding "a way to nullify George's power." Asked why he walked out after the fourth round of the Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier fight Monday night, Foreman shrugged. "I was bored. I wasn't surprised at the outcome, or no outcome. Somebody got something." He explained that he meant that the people who paid all that money got what they paid for. Ringside seats for Ali-Frazier were $100. For Foreman-Norton, the 15,000-seat Polledro in Cars-cas will ask $140.

On March 26, the "head man" will defend his title against Ken Norton in Caracas, Venezuela, a metch expected to be formalized today.

Meanwhile Ali, the self-proclaimed boss, appears to have a number of options. They include a lucrative overseas exhibition tour; another go-round with Prazier, who shared the speaker's platform with him for a while yesterday, and another fight with Jerry Quarry.

"We'd like to work on one more with Joe," said All, whose stylish but conservative pinstripe suit and starthed white shirt contrast-ed with Frazier's wide-brimmed hat and diamond ring.

Frazier, ignoring his wife's request that he retire, said that he could see "a lot of big-money fights ahead," including a return "A couple of times I've been

WASHINGTON—The American nothing. Did you see how I Dollar, which was knocked punched the Japanese Yen?"

"Yes, but people are saying you had some help from the Arab oil embargo on that one."

"People don't know what they are talking about. I could have taken the Yen with or without the oil embargo. The fat Yen was out of training. The Japanese though; it was invincible. But I studied films of my previous fight with the Yen and I discovered B lot of weaknesses in it." "Such as?"

"I'd rather not say because I might have to fight it again." "Champ, would you say your win over the West German Mark was the most important one you've had this year?"

"I didn't knock the Mark out, It was a close decision. But I still have a lot of respect for the Mark, and if I have to fight it again, I'm going to be mighty careful not to let it swing too close to my head." "The other fight people are talking about is your one-round knockout of the British Pound."

"I can't take credit for that," the Dollar said. "The Pound was in oc condition to fight. By the time the British sent it into the ring, it could hardly stand on its legs. I hardly laid a glove on it and it fell over."

"I think you're being too mod-"Man, I'm not modest. I'm as mean as I ever was. But you can't put the Pound in the same class with the Franc and the

Yen. "Champ, now that you're on top again do you think you can stav there?" "As long as people have to pay for oil with dollars I'm going to hold the title." "How do you think you can do against Gold?"

"Now you're talking about the big fight I have coming up. The gamblers are still betting on Gold, but I'm not afraid of it. Hell, it's only as good as the gnomes say it is I'm going to have Gold on the canvas by the 10th round or hang up my gloves. You have to excuse me now. I have to spar B little with the Spanish Pesetajust to keep in condition, you un-derstand."

Little Big Horn Seen as a Proletarian Victory

PARIS (IRT).—The scandal is nothing like that caused by "La Grande which offended on an inter-Bouffe.* national level but still Marco Ferreri has managed to shock with his new film, Touche Pas 1a Femme Blanche" (Hands Off the White Woman), in which he takes the Western, a form as holy in Europe as in the United States, or perhaps holler, and uses it for his own devices. These include commenting on capitalism and genocide and ingeniously staging Custer's Last Stand in the disembowelled belly of Paris, Les Halles. Ferreri says he looked at the huge crater caused by the demolition of Paris's former central markets and from that crater he saw a Western emerge: "Visually, Les Halles is the perfect place to talk about genocide—an ancient setting being destroyed, an enormous crater in the center that suggests the arenas where slaves were killed . ." It's not just another Indian that bltes the dust in Les Halles, but a civilization.

The Cast

Having set Little Big Horn in Paris it seemed perfectly normal to Ferreri to cast French and Italian actors in his Western. Marcello Mastroianni is a monomanizcal and fastidiously chignouned Custer, Michel Piccoli a loudmouth Buffalo Bill, and Serge Reggiani the naked Indian who speaks for Revolution ("Collective action on our part and the Americans

Catherine Deneuve is one of those implacably serene Western heroines, sending her man to the slaughter with cheerful cilchés and making the staunch Olivia de Havilland of "Custer's Last Stand," with Errol Flynn, seem a flinbertigibuet in comparison. One of the best things lo the film is the combination of the traditional Western's straitlaced sentimentality with its awful butchery.

The result is not a parody or Leonesque pasta, but rather a sort of comic strip, or perhaps a "1066 and All That" of the Western, with all the familiar details vaguely remembered and, through repetition, totally changed.

Ferreri has of course seen many West-erns. "Like everyone, I was raised with -Westerns and Topolino (Mickey Mouse)." He's not a fan and especially dislikes the films of John Ford where, he says, "genocide is giorified." The Western, he says, takes, in the most simple Family while he Ferreri takes these same concepts and explodes them through

"It isn't Arizona that makes the Western," he says. "A Western is also ideas. The Western brings us certain ideas; why can't we bring our ideas to the Western?" Ferreri's ideas are of course cootrary to those of the traditional Western. Indians are the downtrodden proletariat and their victory over Custer represents a victory of the people. But, warns the film, there will be other Custers, not necessarily American, "Custer is not typically American hut typical of power," he says. "There are nerican, Greek, and Portuguese Custers." But he does feel a particular anger against the United States:

CLASSIFIED

"You look at the pyramids," he says "and you know the Egyptians sacrificed a lot of people to build them but at least the pyramids are there. The Americans sacrificed s lot of people. What for? Not Ferrerl is an engaged Trotskylte but is convinced that films have no political use. T make films because it is my job, it feeds me," he says.

"I don't especially know what I want to say in a film—that would be an aristocratic approach. If I knew what I wanted to say, I would say nothing. And that

Despite its triumphant juxtaposition of Custer and Les Halles, Ferreri's film is irreparably flawed, partly because he had to shoot in great haste in order to have the Halles background before it totally disappeared under the wrecker's ball. The film has had an inordinate number of titles, perhaps testifying to a certain confusion: "The Western I Dreamed of as a Kid." "The True Life of Custer," "The Last Days of Custer," "General Custer Died in Paris." The English-language title is "Custer Had It Coming."

A heavy, bearded 45-year-old Milanese with a Topolino wristwatch, Ferreri began as a veterinary and has made 17 films marked by a sort of tooth-grinding comedy. "These days one can only speak of sentiments and concepts to a comic way," he says. "Thanks to comedy one can say as many things as, say, Bergman in a dramatic illm." The classic well-made film is, he says, a horrible thing to continue making today—"it's like building the Pantheon again"—while avant-garde intelectuals are, he says, always behind the

His Ideas

In 1971 Ferreri made a 16-mm film at American and Canadian pop festivals called "Perche Pagare per Essere Felici?" (Why Pay to Be Happy?) and a few months ago he returned to New York to promote "La Grande Bouffe." He hated the United States this time, and while part of the reason may he personal pique—"I know John Ford but they doo't know any Italians except Mastrolanni and Fellini"he also felt a genuine horror and desolation there:

"I am angrier than ever with Americans. There is too much ooise over nothing. Wheo you go there is nothing, there are no men. If that's the future, it is sad.

"The young have disappeared in America. Five years ago they were everywhere, one saw things colored by their visions. Now they are gone.

"I never saw a city more unhealthy and dirtier than New York. You look in the garbage cans, there's enough to make 50 kilos of fish soup in one. enough to make 300 kilos in another. And the rot, the horrible rot.

"The faces of the blacks in Times Square -a country should not free B people only to free their mechant side."

No one, says Ferreri, is happy there, not even the rich. The one place he thought civilized and felt happy in was New York's Little Italy. "It's the only possible part of town, Viva la Mafia," he says. Or, as Ferreri might well say in summary, "Give it back to the Indians."

So it was only natural that he had some hints for Egil (Bud) Krogh, the former White House aide who has 10 days to report to Allenwood, where he will serve six months for perjury. "I hadn't seen Bud in some time," said Hunt, as he left the U.S. district courthouse in Washington—he's appealing Judge John J. Sirica's ruling that he cannot withdraw his guilty plea and is out of jail on bond. "I felt a few hints might be helpful, like you would give anybody going to boot camp on entering the service for the first time We had a cordial conversation."

Louis Aragon, the French novel-ist and poet, broke a leg when he was struck by a car while crossing the Place de la Concorde in Paris. The 76-year-old Aragon is reported in satisfactory condition at Bichat Hospital.
